DIVORCE RUMOR IN HIGH CIRCLES

Differences of the Duke and Duchess of Westminster Said to Be Increasing.

HISTORY OF MARRIAGE

Flirtations of Wife to Bring Back Young Husband Threaten to Cause Court Action.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

London, June 20.—The matrimonial differences of the Duke and Duchess of Westminster are proving much more serious than was at first supposed, and a divorce is now considered unavoidable and imminent.

The first intimation of the public had of any difference between the richest duke of England—sometimes called the Duke of London, because he owns more than half the property in the district of Westminster—and his wife was recently when she attended a select function given by the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace, but at which the duke did not appear.

The duchess attended the dance in the Westminster state carriage, but when she returned to Grosvenor House she found the doors of her own home barred against her, the duke having given orders to the servants in her absence that she should not be admitted.

All this was recounted at the time, and the reason given was that the duke had not been invited to the soiree by the royal couple, the Queen having purposefully excluded him to show her disapproval of married men, even of dukes, who were notoriously unfaithful to their marriage vows.

Wife Picked for Duke.

The Duchess of Westminster is five years her husband's senior, and people of their rank are usually the conditions of that marriage, and are very disposed to throw their sympathies on the side of the duke. The story of that marriage, it appears, is this:

Some years ago, during the war, the then very young and unmarried duke went off to South Africa, where he distinguished himself for his bravery and heroic spirit, earning toward his comrades. Not far away from the field of battle there waited and watched a woman, Mrs. Atherton, famed for her beauty, and also in recent years somewhat notorious.

The duke wrote back home to his mother, Lady Grosvenor, that he was going to marry Mrs. Atherton. At once the duke's mother rushed off to her friend, Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, to make counsel.

King in Conference.

A conference was held, in which, it was said, the late King Edward participated. Just before the home-coming of the young duke, his engagement was announced, not to Mrs. Atherton, but to a young girl named Edwina Cornwallis-West, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, who was Miss Jennie Jerome of New York.

It was understood that the young duke knew nothing of all this—that a wife had been chosen for him by his mother and his mother-in-law to be until his arrival in England.

For a time the marriage seemed to be a successful one. Two children, girls, were born to the Duke and Duchess of Westminster. But the duke, young and enormously wealthy, but to all too frequently mixed up with various stage favorites, met Gertie Millar. And his duchess, at last tired of occupying the position of the faithful and unloved wife, herself began taking on admirers, and her flirtations soon became almost as much discussed as those of her husband. These were begun, her friends say, solely in the hope of making her husband jealous, and with the intention to win him back.

Now things of the deepest import are hinted. The duchess, it is said, expects to become a mother again shortly. And the duke has gone so far as to notify by letter the heir to the dukedom, Lord Arthur Grosvenor, that in case the child is a boy it will be named, and he (Lord Grosvenor) need have no fears that this child will interfere with the succession to the Westminster titles and millions.

CONFESSES OLD MURDER.

Man Returns After Seventy-six Years to Tell of Crime.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

Paris, June 20.—A man named Mitel Vallenti returned to France from Brazil some weeks ago and surrendered to the police, stating that he was sentenced to death sixteen years ago while a fugitive from justice for murdering a widow on account of jealousy. He added that he had been driven by remorse to return to France to pay his debt to society.

Vallenti's case was tried at the Couronne last night. He explained that while at Rio Janeiro he met a Protestant clergyman, who converted him. He added: "I have come to expiate my crime in order to set an example. I want to appear before God cleansed of all my sins."

The jury were so impressed by the attitude of the repentant man that they acquitted him.

DIX APPOINTMENT UNLIKELY.

Former New York Governor Is Not Expected to Get Place.

Former Gov. John A. Dix will not be appointed to either a diplomatic position or as Governor General of the Philippines.

This was stated on the highest authority yesterday.

The former Governor had been informed for a place by Senator O'Gorman. At the same time, it was said that Dix might not be recognized by any Federal appointment such as he would be willing to accept because the administration already is committed in a way to a number of prominent New York Democrats, notably W. H. McComb, Justice James W. Girard, Henry Morganthau, and others.

CZAR'S STUDENTS WORK WAY HERE

Large Number of Russian Boys to Come to United States During Vacation.

WILL LOOK FOR JOBS

Twenty-two Killed in Battle Between Peasants and Government Surveying Party.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

St. Petersburg, June 20.—Hundreds of Russian students from both the University and technical institutes are setting out to work their way to the United States this summer, but will return for the next session here in the fall.

The government put pressure on the great engineering establishments and factories to prevent them from employing as they used to, during the long vacation, a number of students who intended afterward to make business careers. It was said that they were chief spreaders of revolutionary propaganda among the plain workers.

As Deckhands and Stokers.

Some hundreds of them are to work their way across the Atlantic this month as deckhands, stewards, and stokers. They are to seek employment in American factories, and hope to bring back useful ideas on industrial organization.

Although the municipal elections were held in Russia last November, neither St. Petersburg, Moscow, nor Odessa has yet a Mayor. Progressives won in all three cities, but the Minister of the Interior, official chief of the political police, refused to confirm any of the men chosen by the city councils. The last to be rejected in St. Petersburg was the government's choice, Count Ivan Tolstoy, who formerly was Liberal Minister of Education in the Witt Cabinet, which launched the constitutional manifesto.

Twenty-two Killed in Battle.

A sanguinary fight between peasants and their women and a government land surveying party is responsible for twenty-two dead and almost 100 seriously injured in the Shumofut district, province of Kazan.

Women of the commune led their men folk with pikes and bay forks against the surveyors, and the police, who had come to parcel out ground in individual ownership, instead of leaving it in the commune.

When the women had pelted the police the latter shot an order to fire. After bloodshed the surrounding districts took the villagers' side, and the government has now withdrawn its surveyors and troops are now quartered over the whole region.

JAP'S RECIPE FOR LONGEVITY.

Tokyo Paper Tells How to Live to Century Mark.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

Tokyo, June 20.—The Japanese newspaper, Jiji Shimpu, published a recipe for living to 100 years, of which the following are the chief points:

Rise early and go to bed early; sleep for six or seven hours in a perfectly dark room; eat no more than is needed to spend as much time as possible in the open air; eat meat only once a day; drink tea and coffee in moderation, and take no tobacco or alcohol; take a hot bath every morning; wear thick clothes and not silk; devote one day a week to rest, and do not read or write on that day; restore the organs which are used up by age by eating the same organs of animals; avoid strong emotion and overexertion of the brain.

The final hint is for men in particular—be a bachelor, get married, if you are a widower, marry again.

Twenty-one Years Entombed.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

Geneva, Switzerland, June 20.—Helen Klausenberg, a half-demented heiress of thirty-five, was placed under police protection at Aargau, Switzerland, after having been kept locked in an underground cellar for twenty-one years by her brother, who had obtained possession of her money by representing that she had died abroad.

Philadelphians in Rome.

Rome, June 20.—Mrs. George B. Aties and Mr. Lewis of Philadelphia, are at the Eden Hotel.

The Main Thing.

Ted—Cheer up, old man! Absence, you know, makes the heart grow fonder.

Ned—What's worrying me is that I'm not just sure that it's having the same effect on the girl.

PLEA MADE BY WILSON

that it appeared to be possible under present conditions for disturbances in business to be effected without anything being basically wrong in the channels of trade or industry.

He thought a systematic plan should be established that would automatically prevent a recurrence of troubles that had beset the country in the past.

This was the time to act, in the opinion of the President. While he did not say so in terms, Mr. Wilson is said to have given his hearers to understand that he believed the country would regard the party as neglected if it failed to include in its programme of accomplishments this session a modern banking and currency law fashioned along the lines of the bill now under consideration.

President Wilson will have another conference with his legislative colleagues from the House next week. This will be followed by conferences with members of the Senate, who are immediately responsible for legislation of this character. By this means the President is said to be hopeful of effecting an understanding that will result in the enactment of a banking and currency law before this session of Congress is brought to an end.

Representative Henry Is Hostile.

Sentiment in the House and the Senate is hostile to the bill for various reasons. In the first place, the leaders are opposed to action on such a measure at this time. There is an element that is opposed to asset currency, the plan around which the Glass-Owen bill is written. It is already apparent that there will be organized opposition to the measure within the Democratic party in the House. Like opposition is expected to break out in the Senate.

Representative Henry of Texas.

Who wants the Money Trust inquiry renewed, is openly opposed to the Glass-Owen bill. While Democrats are not disposed to criticize the Glass bill publicly, they regard it as defective in many particulars. Complaint is made against the failure to provide for the retirement of the present national bank note circulation. It is known that this omission was opposed by Chairman Glass, but that he was overruled by the President, who acted on the advice of the Federal Reserve board, chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency. It is altogether likely that before the bill gets through the House it will be amended so as to provide for the refunding of the 2 per cent bonds on a 3 per cent basis, and the retirement of the existing national bank note circulation.

Object also is made to the composition of the Federal reserve board. The administration bill provides that this board shall be purely a government body. The suggestion is made that the banking community is rightly entitled to representation on the board, and amendment of this import will be offered in the House, and in the Senate if they fail in the House.

The chief menace to the plan of the administration to put through banking and currency legislation at this session is the diffidence of the leaders. They may be spurred along by President Wilson, but the determination not to make the Glass-Owen bill, or such bill as may be reported from committee, a caucus measure, it is known that the leaders take the position that it could be hazardous to attempt to take up the party by means of a caucus. They have so informed the President. The radicals, led by Representative Henry, know that the leaders are at heart opposed to any legislation of this time, and this has encouraged them in laying their plans to block the programme of the administration.

If present plans are carried out, the Glass-Owen bill will be taken up, and committee early next week, probably Tuesday or Wednesday. The first business to be transacted will be embodied in the Bulkley publicity resolution. Just how long it will take the committee to adjust this problem is a matter of speculation. It may be disposed of without delay, but there is at least a prospect that there will be a long-drawn-out controversy over the measure. If things go well, the committee will buckle down to work on the bill by Wednesday. Just when a report will be made will depend upon the influence of the administration and the House leaders with the committee.

MASONIC ORDER BEING ATTACKED

Italians Charge Oath of Society Conflicts with Vows of Army Officers.

DEBATED BY SENATORS

Mason Issues Statement Denying Charges that Pledges Are Incompatible with the Service.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

Rome, June 20.—A heated newspaper controversy as to whether officers of the army and navy may properly belong to the Masonic order has been transferred to the floor of the Chamber of Deputies, causing a spirited debate and no end of embarrassing interruptions.

Several speakers maintained that incompatibility existed between the oath of office, and that the members of Free Masonry, not only for officers of the army and navy, who answer to obey only their superiors, but also for all State employees, and above all, for judges of courts.

The debate disclosed that Italian Free Masonry is an entirely different institution from Masonry in other countries. In Italy it is essentially clanish in character, while its members are strictly forbidden to reveal their affiliation to the order, even to members of their families. The refusal of the war and navy ministers to answer has put Signor Giolitti in an embarrassing situation, as another question, signed by a number of socialist deputies, is now before the chamber, and sometime next week the president of the cabinet must explain "what he thinks of his colleagues' silence on the vexed question."

When pressed for explanation, the general admitted the newspapers with Masonic leanings had attacked him for the only reason that he refused to make a favorable report on the promotion to colonelcy of a certain captain who fought under him at Tripoli and who held a high degree in Masonry.

The matter recently had a powerful echo in the Senate, where Senator Salim attacked Free Masonry, or rather the mystery which surrounds its existence as an institution, and its attitude toward the Papacy and concluded by saying, amid manifest approval of a majority of those present, that it was the duty of the war and navy ministers to see that the officers resign immediately and henceforth abstain from joining Free Masonry.

Ministers Adhere to Silence.

During the debate in the Senate, opportunity was given to Gen. Spingardi, and Admiral Cattolica, war and navy ministers, respectively, to explain to the deputies their attitude on the question. The ministers who had promised to embrace it at the last minute refused, and a bitter debate ensued.

Several speakers maintained that incompatibility existed between the oath of office, and that the members of Free Masonry, not only for officers of the army and navy, who answer to obey only their superiors, but also for all State employees, and above all, for judges of courts.

ROYAL MOTHER-IN-LAW FUS.

Relatives of King Alfonso in Troublesome Disputes.

Paris, June 20.—As a result of the recent visit of the King of Spain, there has been much gossip of discussions between Alfonso's mother and his mother-in-law, Princess Henry of Battemberg, mother-in-law to the King, sold her property at Osborne and is going to live in Madrid. This pleases her daughter, Queen Victoria, of Spain. The King good-naturedly is indifferent.

But, the Queen mother, Christina, is strongly opposed to the proximity of her son's mother-in-law. Queen Christina wishes the King's sons to be brought up Spanish fashion.

Princess Beatrice wishes them to be educated more in English fashion with a strong love of sports predominating. King Alfonso is a partisan of both mothers.

Inhales Toy Balloon.

London, June 20.—Agnes Catherine Duke, thirteen years old, was killed here by a rubber tissue toy balloon. She was playing with it and accidentally inhaled it. The rubber tissue filled her windpipe, and she was suffocated.
